Application.

official boards of the dist churches in Atlanta and Holland will hold a joint session at the New Holland church at 8 p. m. Wednesday to consider proposal to re-hire Rev. W. H.
Harble as pastor. The session will be private.

Harble resigned his charge
last week after unofficial talks concerning his conduct were made.

LEARNED OF CHARGES
Investigating committee, appointed by Dr. E. C. Stafford, dissuperintendent, however,
recently cleared Rev. Harble of wrongdoing, although advising him of deserting his charge without formal action
being taken.

It was said that Rev. Harble, who was at the home of his brother, Harble, near Logan, has been re-instated as pastor of the two churches.

Application to return was made to Dr. Stafford last week.
Stafford transmitted it to the two churches.

PARISH DECLINED
Harble's request to be allowed to resume his labors at Atlanta and New Holland came after
T. Steele, of near Crooksville, was tendered the pastorate and declined to accept it.

Two churches have limited
Sunday services to Sunday
since the departure of Rev.
Harble, who served them three years. The Atlanta congregation numbered 200 persons and
New Holland, 300.

Two Wee Hearts Are Cheered By Postal Workers

Two little sad hearts were made happy Christmas eve by the early arrival of a very nice Santa Claus with a great pack on his back and a tricycle in his hand. Just after dark on Christmas eve, when the candles for the Christ Child had been placed in many windows,
Santa walked in the front door
at the Helwage residence on E.
Main-st where Paul Rudy and Kenneth Eugene Helwage, orphaned sons of the late Paul Hel-wage, had sat wide eyed, awaiting him. When he did arrive, the wait had been a little long and the kiddies were almost asleep in big chairs, with tired heads on grandma's and auntie's arms.

But they had been told to wait
for Santa Claus and so were expecting him, but even when the wonder and joy of it all was almost too much for the little fellows who so recently lost their daddy.

This Christmas for the Helwa-ge children was planned and carried out by the employees of the post office of Circleville where Paul Helwage was a mail carrier. The men at the office worked twice as hard at their busiest time to finish their work so that they could accomplish this for their former fellow worker.

It was the special delivery mail
truck that transported Santa Claus and his pack to the residence, and it was Leslie Pontius as a big husky St. Nick, who swung the pack of toys over his back and walked in to distribute the toys.

of the residence of Rev. Rhodes,

CIRCLEVILLE'S PROSPERITY MATTER OF CO-OPERATION

The people of Circleville have the town's prosperity in their own hands, according to the tenth community-boosting advertisement of the local merchants and professional people.

The boosting committee says, in its full page ad, that the citizens of Circleville must first of all BE-LIEVE in the community and then devote the necessary energy to really bring about prosperity.

It is true that prosperity must first be born in the human mind, while there is a certain amount of growth in population and business that may come with little or no effort, real prosperity must be created and planned just as an architect plans a building. And the more the dream takes the form of a definite, workable plan, the quicker the town attains its position amongst progressive cities.

Circleville has possibilities and opportunities galore—just the same as many other towns and cities that are coming to the front.
Take St. Petersburg, Florida—a few years ago a small, unimportant town on the west coast of Florida. Suddenly, the citizens of the town got together and decided that St. Petersburg must progress.

A definite plan was laid. Everybody joined hands and hearts in their efforts to make a place in the sun for their beloved town.

Today, St. Petersburg is known all over the globe. It has increased its population many times;
its building activities jumped from thousands to millions, and it is considered one of the top notch cities of its size in the world.

Circleville can profit as St.
Petersburg did—and as many other towns have profited, where earnest deep-thinking, hard-working citizens banded together for corporate good and accomplishment. We can build Circleville into the finest town on the Road to Success—if all of us will be loyal and work together.

Individual effort is the thing that is going to count in this campaign for a bigger and better Circleville. As individuals, we can contribute to the town's accomplishments by doing our civic duties whenever called upon. We can lend our individual efforts, no matter how small, to keeping our homes neat and clean, thus adding to the town's attractiveness.

We can give our individual cooperation—morally, physically and financially—to any movement
that's going to mean better things or better living conditions for the town.

We can help wonderfully in this well-grounded campaign by being loyal to our home merchants in order that they may progress more rapidly and be better able

HOTEL BLAZE CLAIMS TOLL

Six Die and Seven Are Injured
On Christmas Day Fire
At Akron.

AKRON, O., Dec. 26—Spontaneous combustion was assigned today as the cause of the fire which swept a section of the Park hotel here yesterday, taking a toll of six dead and seven injured.

Five of the victims were trapped
on the third floor and suffocated. The sixth, a man, was caught on the second floor and overcome.

The blaze originated in a pile of rubbish, according to fire department officials. Seventy-five other guests, on the first and second floors, managed to reach the street, although seven were partially overcome.

Dense clouds of smoke penetrated the building and all those killed died in the corridors while they were trying to reach the stairway.
The building was not equipped with outside fire escapes.

Those killed were:
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Alexander,
Charles King, 28; W. W. Wilson,
28, of Plain City; Clark Burrill,
44, and Lucian G. Curtis, 20.

Fire Chief John Metz reached the conclusion that spontaneous combustion caused the blaze. The fire had been burning for some time before an alarm was turned in, he said.

An official investigation will be conducted today by Metz and the state fire marshal.

CHRISTMAS IS MARRED BY MANY DEATHS

More Than 170 Lives Are Lost
In Tragedies At Yuletide Celebrations.

By United Press
Violent death was an unwanted guest at scores of Christmas celebrations in the U. S. this year.

A United Press survey today
revealed that traffic accidents,
fires, fireworks and poison liquor
took a heavy toll of human life
on the holiday.

With some parts of the country
still unheard from the total of violent deaths reported in the country had reached 170 at mid-morning and there was every indication that the figure would pass the 200
mark later in the day.

Fires were especially prevalent
in the old south, where Christmas is celebrated with fire crackers
and Roman candles like the fourth of July in the north.

Poison liquor deaths were confined mostly to the east, where nine were recorded over the holidays in New York City and one in western New York state.

Traffic and hunting accidents
were general throughout the country. Three skaters were drowned in Massachusetts.

The nationwide death toll classified by causes is as follows:
Traffic 102.
Poison liquor 12.
Fires and fireworks 31.
Hunting accidents, drownings,
shootings and suicides, 25.
Total 170.

More than thirty men and women have assembled at the armory, where for the next four days they will do nothing but talk. They may laugh, if they choose, or cry or sing, as long as they emit sounds, however, unintelligible.
On Saturday night the contest ends,
and the individual who has used his vocal chords the greatest number of hours will receive $1,000.

One woman is trying to read the Bible in four days because she has

CLUB CAGERS GET LEAD IN ONE QUARTER

Enthusiastic Crowd Cheers Players As They Battle In Fast Game.

In a fast and thrilling game, with the score tied about 10 times, the Bliss college quintet battled to a two-point victory over the C. A. C. team Christmas night in the local gym. The final score was 38 to 36.

At the end of the third quarter the local boys had a six point lead over the collegians a score of 28 to 22. A good crowd attended the game and the contest was played on the sidelines as well as on the floor.

During the first half the Bliss quintet outplayed the local team but the C. A. C. rallied for a nice lead the end of the third quarter.

FINAL FRAME HOT

From the third quarter on the game was torrid. All of the players on the C. A. C. team played a good game. The teams were matched perfectly and the playing was probably the best local fans have witnessed for some time.

Steel, star forward for the local crew, was closely guarded by Clifton and found few chances to break loose for a basket.

COMPLICATION OF AILMENTS YIELD TO NEW KONJOLA

Years of Agonizing Pain and Nervousness Find First and Only Conquerer in Master Medicine.

MRS. LIDA HUBER.

"I am lost in wonderment at what this splendid Konjola did for my stomach and kidney troubles and nervousness and did I not have the actual experience myself I would have doubted that one single medicine could bring such results," said Mrs. Lida Huber, 15 Ridgeway Avenue, Dayton, Ohio.

"For many years I had stomach and kidney disorders that dragged my health down to such a level that I was well nigh a nervous wreck. I had to get up many times at night, pains pierced my back and I had dizzy spells. My food did not digest and gas pains were almost too much to bear after each meal. I became so weak I could just walk, that was all."

"A friend urged me to take Konjola. I started this medicine and immediately knew I had found an honest remedy. It relieved me right from the beginning. My stomach and kidneys were regulated and strengthened so that the sensations caused by them disappeared. My appetite came back. I eat anything. Sleep restores strength and vitality. That is what Konjola does for all sufferers. Do you want me for endorsing it?"

Konjola is sold in Circleville, O., at the Mykantz Pharmacy drug store, and by all the best drug stores throughout this entire section.

Circleville, on Friday evening, meets Greenfield high at Greenfield. This is a non-league game, and it is believed few will journey with the team to that city. Greenfield will again meet Circleville on Feb. 8 here.

The C. H. S. girls' team have an open date for Dec. 28.

Thursday evening at 7:45 o'clock the Darbyville high school will open the regular high school program with two games with Williamsport on the Darbyville floor. After the game between the high schools the Darbyville Independents will meet the Jackson quintet on the same floor.

This will probably be the only chance Pickaway-co basketball fans will have to see a trio of good games during the vacation period.

The Olympic Games, as far as track and field went, found the traditional supremacy of the United States challenged as never before, and while our boys won handily, the balance of athletic power obviously is shifting. The outstanding feature of every Olympiad is the marathon run, which was won at Amsterdam by Abdel El Ouafi, a 24-year-old Algerian, now running in the United States as a professional.

$44,000 Bench Star Goes to Newark

For four years he has graced the bench of the Yankee dugout at a total intake of approximately $44,000, including the proceeds from four full World Series cuts.

In four years he has played at only rare intervals. His first appearance was in 1923, when he sat out a season and a world series and drew down $11,000, of which $6,200 was series money. In 1924 and '25 he was in the minors, but he returned in 1926 and sat and sat and sat to the tune of $6,000 and world series dough. He did it again in 1927, and in 1928 he got a thousand extra for patching the woodwork in addition to the series coin.

SWIMMING ACE TO ENTER ON BUSINESS

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Johnny Weissmuller, regarded by many as the greatest swimmer of all time, will hang up his swimming suit next week and invade the world of business to seek his fortune.

Weissmuller holds virtually every amateur free style world's record in pools of 50 to 880 yards, both indoors and outdoors.

No announcement was made as to what line of business Weissmuller intends to enter although it was reported stage appearances would be included.

Weissmuller will remain a member of the Illinois Athletic Club but will not compete for the club, he said in a letter announcing his retirement from amateur ranks.

Bringing Prosperity to Circleville

Prosperity is a condition that is brought about mainly by the public mind.

If we, first of all, BELIEVE in our community and then actively give our energy toward real progress--Circleville will have its best start toward genuine prosperity.

True prosperity means honest and efficient government, a contented populace, a healthful community, greater co-operation and conservation of supplies.

No single individual can hope to bring about full prosperity to Circleville. Every man, woman and child here must constantly have the welfare and the community at heart AND ACT ACCORDINGLY.

Co-operative efforts toward an attractive town, support of our schools and churches, contribution of effort to public enterprises, civic patriotism and loyalty to home merchants--are the most effective means of attaining community prosperity.

If everybody in Circleville will TALK, THINK AND ACT FOR THE COMMUNITY'S GOOD--we'll put our fair city on the map as an outstanding example of civic prosperity.

We, the undersigned, Believers in Circleville, heartily endorse the above:

BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD SAVES TO THE UTTERMOST.—Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear.—Isa. 59:1.

PRAYER.—Lord save us else we perish.

OVERHEATED ROOMS

Here's a tip for parents of small children who fear that winter weather will bring their youngsters cold and sickness.

Dr. Harvey Wiley, writing in Good Housekeeping Magazine, says that the chief reason children have more colds in winter than in summer is that in the winter they are prone to live in overheated living rooms and to sleep in overheated and unventilated bedrooms.

A sleeping room, he says, should always be ventilated, even in the coldest weather, and is better far unheated in cold weather than overheated.

Probably most of us tend to overheat our homes. Any doctor will corroborate what Dr. Wiley says; the surest way to catch cold is to have too much heat.

RUSH PERIODS

The holiday season is not the only time when a lot of people have to hurry and scurry and worry. Almost every business has its rush periods, when work seems to heap up in perfect mountains. Letters and telephones and telegrams bring rush orders and everyone wants everything done all at once.

Such conditions are irritating to business men and all their workers. They may have dangled away for weeks with insufficient work, when they in vain implore people to take an interest in their goods. Then people wake up at the same moment, and demand goods in a hurry. It becomes impossible to supply all these needs immediately. Business tends to run by these fits and starts, largely because people will not anticipate their wants, and they are much governed by styles and fashions which come and go swiftly.

These rush periods are a strain on human nerves. People wilt under them and often go to pieces. Many of them get so cross and irritated that it is very unpleasant to do business with them.

It is quite an art to go through with rush periods, and not make them worse by complaint and cross words. Most of the store people in Circleville acquired this art admirably, and we take off our hats to them. The public is not always so good natured, and many of us need to cultivate an equable disposition, and learn to say pleasant words even in a bad rush.

One smiling person can do a lot of good in a rush period, and that individual's good nature relieves tension and makes people feel a little less impatient and worried. Complaints and ill nature turn everything sour, and they spoil the Christmas season, and they clog the wheels of activity in rush periods anywhere.

Thoughts of Wise Men

"If I had the time to find a place And sit me down full face to face With my better self, that cannot show In my daily life that rushes so, It might be I should find my soul Was stumbling still toward the shining goal—I might be perved by the thought sublime, If I had the time."

Fine sense and exalted sense are not half so useful as common sense; there are forty men of wit for one of good sense; and he that will carry nothing about with him but gold will be every day at a loss for reader change.

—ADDISON.

It may be set down as a certainty that no form of society is permanent which makes any person ashamed of ever having done a stroke of honest labor.

CABBAGES and KINGS

"The time has come," the Walrus said, To talk of many things: Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax— Of cabbages—and kings— And why the sea has boiled— And of the little girls—and bears— And all the wonders of the year—

The Queen of Rumania gave the King of Rumania a little gold statuette she bought in Paris of Paul Revere doing his famous ride. Just why a Rumanian king should give a Rumanian king a French model of an American patriot is not quite clear unless she said "It's so hard to buy anything for a man."

What is tact? Well, this: A man went home the other evening to find his wife worn out from doing Christmas shopping. She had worked all day trying to make nine dollars cover two hundred dollars worth of gifts. She was footsore and heartsore and weary past belief, and she had a sort of panicky poverty-stricken feeling. Also, she was firmly convinced that there was no Santa Claus. It was at this juncture that her husband told the funny story of losing fifty dollars on a fool bet at the club, and in telling it he laughed heartily. Now, tact is what the feller didn't have.

This defender of Light and Love has always shielded its gentle readers, if any, from the sordid things of life. We feel that both of you will be interested, though, to learn of the death at the hands of a mob, of a smart Alec in Iowa whose chief delight was calling up his acquaintances and insisting that they "guess who this is." The coroner returned a verdict of suicide.

At this time of the year, when winter steals across the world, a man becomes impatient of his familiar office processes, his ordered life, his well managed home, his pipe, his books, his bridge and his vices. He roams about the house, vaguely discontented, he wanders out and gazes wistfully at the sky and feels a certain fellowship with the distant bound dog, mournfully baying at the moon. He takes in the garden hose, he splits an old soap box into kindlings, reads a bedtime story to his son, yawns fitfully. Winter has begun, but he has lost his heritage.

Every instinct in him, every impulse, urges him to away and away. Long forgotten memories of the chase, of gargantuan deeds in a younger world, on a rock strewn plain, under such another moon ages ago, tug restlessly at old cords in his fancy. He is thinking of the youth of the world of the Lost Country. He winds the clock and bawls out his wife. He locks the doors lest burglars enter and take his wife's six solid silver teaspoons. The old, brave days have gone. Romance has been dry cleaned in gasoline, the howling of the sabertooth tiger is drowned in the shrieks of jazz. The hissing of the giant lizard is merged with the swish of feet doing the Bandola. We have traded our valiant youth for something safer, more comfortable, infinitely duller. Boy, tune in on Pittsburgh.

Old time loafers used to sit and whittle. They still sit, but whittling is a thing of the past, the present day loafer devotes his time exclusively to loafing.

A game warden has been fined for shooting a fisherman, and this gives us a little ray of hope. Of course nobody expected him to be put in jail, but it is something at least that a fine was imposed.

The old free days when game wardens could shoot fishermen at will, for a pasture, seem to be over.

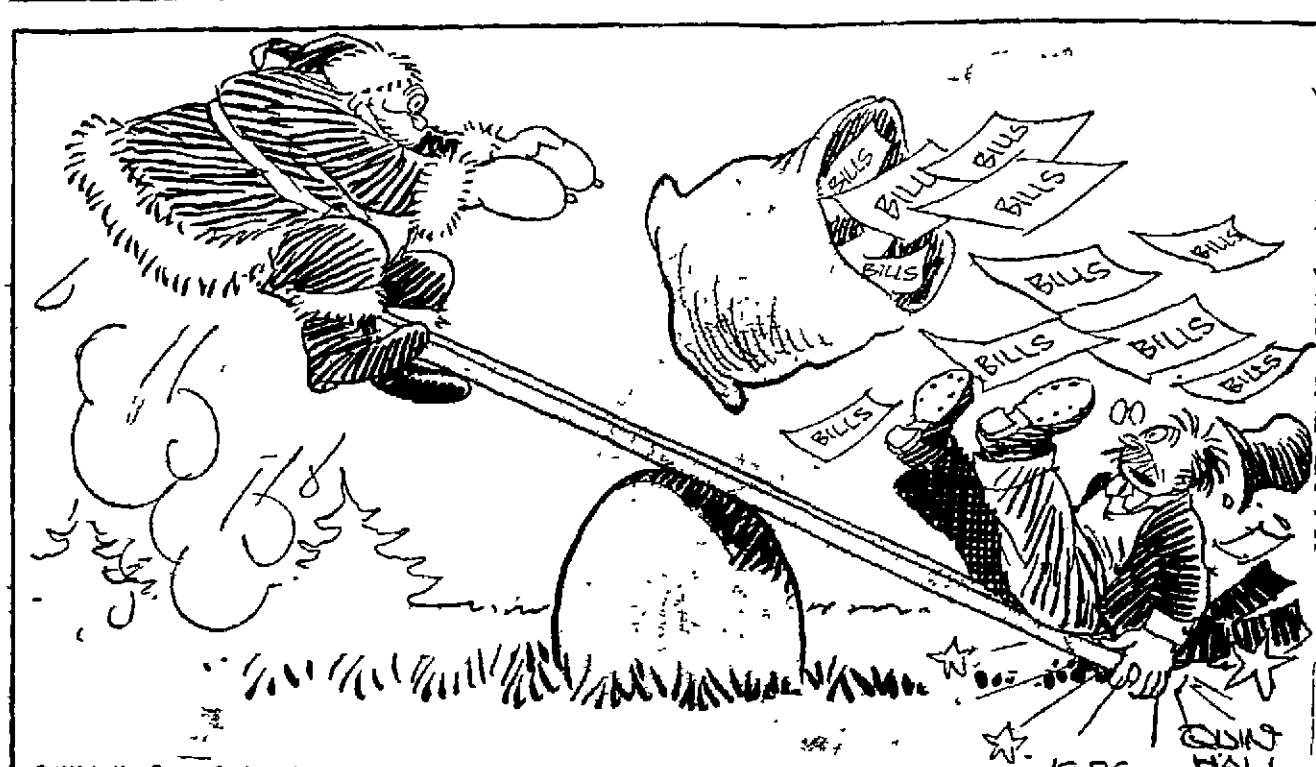

Placer gold has been discovered in Alaska. As we understand it, this is the kind that grows on the surface, that one can pick up with a market basket on his arm. It is the only kind that a lot of folks would take the trouble to harvest nowadays.

"I did my best," is always an honorable slogan, if it is true, yet it is a hard fact in life that in baseball it is the actual runs that count, and in football all that gets chalked up is the final score. The world pays off on results and not intentions. Ain't this deep stuff?

Cleveland reports a baby of two months that can stand on her head. Any baby of that age will if it isn't watched.

Irked at our lack of appreciation amounting to strong distaste, of Russian, Japanese, French, Chinese and Italian dishes, which seem to find much favor among the more enlightened of the present time a young lady the other day undertook to tell us: "If you would get away from old-fashioned cooking one, you'd learn something." In return for her kindly interest we announced, in quavering tones, that as long as we retained our feeble faculties we're not going to get away from old-fashioned cooking as long as it holds out. Now that, praise be, is settled.

THE MORNING AFTER

Peaks of Desire by Kane O'Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JERRY DUNN, reporter, falls in love with Ann Tremaine, a wealthy debutante. He takes her to live at his boarding house, and introduces her to a new world. She is attracted to Steve Harrison, a husky young mechanic of whom Jerry is jealous. Ann gets a job in a small theatre owned by Nick Pagalos, and later asks her employer to hire Steve. One night Pagalos makes love to Ann, and in the battle which ensues between him and Steve, the Greek is made to realize his error. That night Steve confesses his love to Ann, and they embrace. Steve tells Ann he is leaving his job and going into the trucking business. In the meantime a blonde has been looking for Ann at the theatre. Ann realizes it is Maizie Thompson, an ex-sweetheart of Steve's.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

ANN and Steve entered the rooming house, their joint home, together. A strip of light showed under Jerry Dunn's door and she bade Steve good night with a nod; his feet were heavy, his face unhappy as he climbed the stairs to his own room on the floor above. Ann tapped lightly on Jerry's door.

"Come," she called. "I got up from the typewriter, where he had been working on one of his numerous manuscripts. The room was more spacious than her own and the chairs were more comfortable. The day-bed and the bookshelf made it look less like a bedroom. He shook hands with her and she noticed a buoyancy about him, the absence of tension from his eyes. If he were a young man distraught by love he gave a very good imitation of a casual, pleasant host. "Sit down and rest yourself—smoke, drink and be merry."

She noticed the cracked ice, glasses and several bottles on his table. "I'll have a cigarette but I don't think I'll drink this evening, if you don't mind." "That's not hootch—it's bottled fruit juice and absolutely non-alcoholic. How things have broken for you since I've been gone?" It occurred to Ann how little she really knew about Jerry Dunn. For instance, she did not know whether he was an habitual drinker. He had spoken familiarly of speakeasies, but apparently he was addicted to soft drinks. She took a cigarette and settled back in her chair. "I didn't know you were on the wagon," she said curiously. He grinned. "I'm reforming all down the line." He said, "I've even quit breaking my heart over you. If I ever hope to get any serious writing done I've got to cut out the women and booze."

"Hey, I'm not a woman—in that sense!" She had a feeling he was refusing to take her seriously, and it brought her a slight disappointment. But perhaps it was only a pose—a part of his strategy. "Sure, you're a woman—you're all a woman. I fell head over heels in love with you and I was tearing myself apart with disappointment until I decided to cut a bait. You've made it pretty clear that I washed up as a suitor—so I'm snapping out of it. I wanted you to love and a mire me but you didn't and—well, I'll be pals, eh?" "Absolutely," she smiled at him, fearful lest he discern that she was a little crestfallen. After all, she didn't want him to stop loving her entirely. "It won't be any strain at all to be just plain good friends with you."

"How's the big Swede coming along?" he asked her. She was puzzled by this bit of the vernacular. "What Swede?" "Steve Harrison—you still playing around with him?" "Oh, I see him occasionally." Jerry Dunn was busy with the glasses and fruit juice. "Well, speaking only as a friend, I think you've the right to follow up your impulses in whatever direction they lead. That's the cold-blooded slant of Steve, but you know what I think about it all, when I spoke in the midst of my recent heart break."

"Just because you're a friend you needn't be so doggone cold-blooded about me," she protested.

Czar Paul, Autocrat of all the Russias. He was a most fascinating figure so historians tell us, and Jennings has succeeded in capturing the spirit of his character. Mad Paul had the heart of a child, and the brain of a tiger. Jennings portrays both.

There are others in the cast too, who add to the film triumph. Florence Vidor is delightful as the Countess Ostermann. Lewis Stone as Pahlen, and the leading figure in the conspiracy has done his best work to date. Neil Hamilton as the Crown Prince Alexander gives a very human character. Others who contribute are Vera Vornolina and Harry Cording.

HAS SPIRIT OF PLAY William Code Miller's production of "Craig's Wife" which is showing at the Cliftona theatre is said to have caught with amazing fidelity the spirit of this remarkable play by George Kelly. "Craig's Wife" was awarded the Pulitzer prize as the outstanding dramatic production of a New York season, and has also been published in book form. Irene Rich and Warner Baxter play the leading roles.

EFFICIENT CARE OF INFANT IS ESSENTIAL

Nothing So Vitally Important to Baby's Welfare—Perhaps His Very Life—As Knowing How When and What to Feed Him.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

SOMEBODY mailed me a poem. It may not amount to much according to the rules of poetry, but it heralds an important truth.

Here is the first stanza.

"Thrilled and happy as you may be at the advent of a baby
(And who wouldn't be exuberant with joy?)
You will presently discover that a lot of problems hover
Round the rearing of a girl or boy.
Love can't be your sole reliance—It should aid
Not hamper science.
And, although your heart with ecstasy may throbb
Sense and wisdom, too, are needed.
Here's the motto to be heeded:
Build your baby strong and ruddy is a task for toll and study.
Know Your Job."

I don't vouch for the technical features of this poem, but I thoroughly indorse its teachings. No mother can raise her baby unless she knows her job.

Love is found in the heart of every mother. If need be, she is ready to die for her child. But, as the poet said "Love can't be the sole reliance." "Building bodies strong and ruddy is a task for toll and study."

If mother and baby are fortunate enough to be able to depend on breast-feeding all is well. Under those circumstances there is little to worry over. Regularity in the feedings and attention to fresh air and sunlight will make the future of the baby very bright.

But when weaning time comes, or in case it is found necessary to take the breast away soon after the baby's birth, then indeed the mother has a real job on her hands. It is true that the baby is born to thrive, she must know her job, and every detail of that job.

Preparing the feedings requires the greatest care. The utensils and the mother's hands must be clean. When I say "clean," I mean a lot more than the removal of visible dirt. The hands of the mother who prepares the feedings must be just as thoroughly cleaned as the surgeon cleanses his.

The utensils for preparing the milk must be boiled and kept in a perfectly clean place. The bottles must be prepared with the same care. I need not tell you that the milk must come from healthy and clean cows. It must be kept in a temperature low enough to keep it free from the suspicion of taint.

The particulars to-morrow will be prescribed by your doctor. But there must be greatest accuracy in measuring out the proportions of milk, water and other ingredients. Then the feedings must be given on a railroad schedule. The schedule must not be varied five minutes. You can see that to know the job is vitally essential to the welfare indeed to the very life of the infant. It is indeed true that "Building bodies strong and ruddy is a task for toll and study."

Answers to Health Queries

K. C. K. Q.—I have dizzy spells, nervous and feel light-headed when out in a crowd. My knees feel weak and numb at times. What would you advise?

A.—Poor circulation and nervousness are probably responsible for your condition. Build up your health in general and your entire system, including your nerves, will benefit. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

GIFT FROM JOKER WAS UNPOPULAR

While many persons in Circleville received numerous, pleasing and delightful gifts, the Yuletide season also brought out the practical jokers and their wares. The gifts of these laugh loving citizens varied, but the most action resulted Tuesday afternoon when a small colored boy handed a present to a well known man around town. The presentation took place on Court-st where the eruption of fury also burst forth when the package was opened. The "gift" was hurried into the street and may be found by careful search.

ARTICLE No. 18

In the preceding article a number of interesting hands, submitted by correspondents, were given and opinions asked as to the proper bids and play. Here are the solutions:

Answer to Problem No. 20

Hearts—A, K, 8
Clubs—K, 8, 6, 4, 2
Diamonds—none
Spades—K, 8, 7, 4

Hearts—7, 6, 2
Clubs—J, 3
Diamonds—A, K, Q, J, 10
Spades—10, 6, 5

Hearts—Q, J, 4, 3
Clubs—10, 9
Diamonds—9, 8, 7, 6, 5
Spades—A, 9

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A passed and Y bid one club. If B passed, what should Z bid with the foregoing hand?

Z should bid one heart. If he does A will bid two diamonds. Y will bid two hearts and all will pass. A will open the king of diamonds, which Y will trump with the eight of hearts. Y's best play is to lead the ace king and deuce of clubs, trumping the third round of clubs in Z's hand with the jack of hearts, thus shutting out A. Z should now lead two rounds of hearts winning both in Y's hand. Y should then place Z in the lead with the ace of spades so that he may lead his queen of hearts, thus taking out all of the trumps. Z should now lead the nine of spades, winning the trick in Y's hand with the king of spades. Y's three club tricks are now good; thus Z has only one spade trick. This surprising hand is a most interesting one, both in the bidding and the play, so note it carefully.

Answer to Problem No. 21

No score, rubber game. If Z dealt, bid one no trump and A passed, what should Y bid with the foregoing hand? Y should bid two clubs. The hand is too unbalanced to justify its play as a no trump; yet it is strong enough to offer a chance for game at clubs. If the partner should bid two no trump, Y should bid three clubs. If partner then bids three no trump, Y should pass. If partner should bid two hearts over Y's two club bid, Y should bid two no trump. If partner should bid two diamonds or two spades, Y should pass.

Don't hesitate to take "odds" your partner's no trump bid when you have a singleton or a void suit, whether your long suit is a minor or a major. The usual distributions that warrant a take-out are 4-4-4-1; 5-4-3-1; 6-4-2-1; 5-5-2-1; 5-4-4-0; 7-3-2-1; 7-4-2-0, or any longer suit. Such take-outs are the so-called distribution take-outs and are being followed pretty generally.

If your partner knows that you take out with a singleton or void suit, he usually can figure out the missing suit and then, if he thinks the no trump bid offers a better chance for game, he can take it.

should bid two no trump. It is then up to you to decide whether you should open with your bid or let the no trump bidder try for game. The purpose of all sound bidding is to find the suit that will best fit twenty-six cards, not thirteen, and this purpose can only be carried out by bidding. Don't hesitate to take-out your partner's no trump bid whenever you hold any of the distributions just specified.

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed. A passed, Y bid one no trump. B bid two hearts; Z bid two spades and A passed. Y bid two no trump, B bid three diamonds. Z bid three spades and all passed. A opened a low heart which B won with the ace. B returned a low heart, and all followed suit. How should Z play the hand from there on?

Y's hand is in the lead. Z knows that B has both the ace queen of diamonds and the top hearts. Therefore, he should so plan the play that he can set up a diamond trick, if possible, and thus obtain one heart discard. The other losing heart he must trump in Y's hand.

At trick three, therefore, Y should lead the six of diamonds, which B must win with the queen, all following suit. B's best lead is a spade, which Y should win with the ace as A will play short in that respect. Y should now lead the jack of diamonds and B must play the ace. Z should trump this and lead a heart. A has no hearts so he can either overtrump Y's seven of spades or discard. In no way can A win more than one spade trick. When Y's hand obtains the lead, Y should lead the king of diamonds which is now good and discard Z's lost heart.

Played in this way, Y Z should only lose one heart, one diamond and one spade trick at the most. It is a pretty hand and should be played out for practice. To do this properly, give five hearts to the ace, five diamonds to the ace queen and then distribute the remaining cards in different ways.
